

Appendix D — Classroom Assignment Announcement (No Flyer)

No recruitment flyer / separate lab form

No flyer for the course assignment. Optional emails and the list of HSIRB-approved studies are on a separate lab page (/studies/lab/) and are not formal SJT data collection.

Recruitment method

No recruitment flyer is used for the course assignment.

(1) MNGT 425 and MNGT 502 students: The instructor announces the study as an in-class course assignment via normal classroom / LMS communication. Students may (a) participate in the research study by completing the online HR SJT after informed consent, or (b) complete an equivalent qualitative alternative assignment submitted to the instructor for credit. Alternative submissions are grading-only and not analyzed as research data.

(2) Working employees / community participants interested in management topics: Invited through professional and community outreach (e.g., networks, email) using a brief study description and consent link. No flyer required.

(3) Lab studies list (separate form): A public page lists HSIRB-approved studies available for participation and offers an optional email signup to stay informed about lab studies. That form is not part of formal SJT data collection.

Verbatim announcement

MNGT 425 / MNGT 502 — Classroom Assignment Announcement (verbatim; no flyer)

Study Title: HR Situational Judgment Test: Evidence-Based HR Decision-Making

As an in-class assignment, you are asked to participate in an exploratory research study on how people interested in management topics rate the effectiveness of workplace tactics.

Option A — Research study assignment:

Complete the online HR Situational Judgment Test (27 scenarios). You may rate tactic effectiveness (optional; you may skip any situation) and optionally add notes about how you are thinking through each decision. After informed consent, your ratings may be included in the research dataset. Duration: approximately 45–60 minutes. Must be 18 or older.

Option B — Alternative assignment (not research / not analyzed as study data):

Write a qualitative description of how you would respond to each scenario prompt and submit it to the instructor for equivalent course credit.

This is used only for grading.

Both options satisfy the course assignment.

Community / working employees — outreach description (verbatim):

Study Title: HR Situational Judgment Test: Evidence-Based HR Decision-Making

You are invited to complete an online situational judgment exercise with 27 workplace scenarios. We welcome working employees and others interested in management topics. Participation is voluntary, takes about 45–60 minutes, and is for adults 18+. Aggregate findings may later be shared with participants who optionally join a separate lab mailing list.
